American Forces Smash W. Anchor of Red Defense Line

CAPTURE 10 CHINESE

S. Korean Units Compelled To Abandon Toe Hold On River Boundary

By Irving R. Levine
(I. N. S. War Correspondent)

SEOUL, Oct. 31.—(INS)—Two Red divisions, reportedly including many Chinese, drove spearheads to within 15 miles of Hamhung today and U. S. Marines hurried to that northeast Korean hub to meet the advancing foe.

On the opposite side of an exploding 240-mile trans-peninsular front, however, American armored forces smashed the western anchor of the Communist defense line with a 15-mile breakthrough plunge beyond Chongju.

Inland in northwest Korea, other American units pressed within 34 miles of Manchuria's border against strong resistance by augmented Red forces fighting with new equipment including tanks, self-propelled guns, mortars and landmines.

South Korean units, compelled to abandon an exposed toe hold on the Yalu river international boundary and make retreats ranging up to 30 miles, continued to insist that Chinese Red troops composed the bulk of the enemy forces attacking them.

But Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters remained reluctant to acknowledge that any Chinese Communist forces, as such, have intervened in the Korean war. "At last report, the total of Chinese captured was ten," said MacArthur's briefing officer late Tuesday.

"It is such a small number that as yet we are not prepared to say that a Chinese Communist force has entered this battle under the direction of a Chinese Communist force general headquarters."

Field advisers reported that considerably more than ten Chinese, disguised in North Korean uniforms, have been captured and others killed in both the northwest and northeast sectors of the arching front.

However United Nations headquarters, declined up until late Tuesday to support South Korean claims that these Chinese were regular members of China's giant Red army sent across the Yalu into Korea.

Further investigation was in progress amid new South Korean reports that substantial parts of the two enemy divisions bearing down on Hamhung were composed of Chinese soldiers.

The big industrial and rail hub near the North Korean east coast was increasingly menaced by powerful Red columns striking from the northwest and north.

Battlewise troops of the American First Marine Division were moved into the area for what may become the war's first major battle since the capture of Seoul last month.

Gen. MacArthur said in a Tuesday afternoon communique that ROK (Republic of Korea) Third Division forces were engaged Monday by a "stubbornly" resisting enemy group "supported by 15 tanks and artillery" near Sudong, 20 miles northwest of Hamhung.

Front dispatches, covering later developments, said the enemy troops had slashed within 15 miles

Predicting even finer films, due to the extensive training of "movie" stars, Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, Philadelphia, a member of the State Censorship Board, told members of the Doylestown Junior Women's Club, Wednesday evening, that it is no longer the soda fountain "jerk" or drive-in waitress, who jumps into stardom but well trained actors and actresses.

Bringing out that the "movie" industry is the seventh highest in the world, she praised the film as a fine method of putting forth the freedom and opportunity of America to the nations of the world, and also of bringing an understanding of other countries in exchange. The beauty of the country, as well as that of the entire world, is placed before the school children of today, she added, with finest music and other arts.

POPULATION SHIFTS CAUSE PROBLEMS

Providing Public Services To Meet Demands Creates Difficulties

STATE-WIDE PROBLEM

By Ed Hauk
INS Staff Correspondent
HARRISBURG, Oct. 31.—(INS)—Officials of Pennsylvania's larger cities today face the problem of public services to meet demands resulting from population changes.

The 1950 census showed, while Pennsylvania gained 536,000 more people in 10 years, 29 counties lost population mostly through migration to the state's larger centers of commercial and manufacturing employment.

Roy Helton, of the State Planning Board, pointed to two main currents of postwar migration which will have a specific bearing on the cities' futures.

They are (1) the movement to towns of great numbers of Pennsylvanians from rural areas and (2) the shift of city dwellers to suburban fringe areas of central cities.

"Most of the larger cities need

MISCHIEF NIGHT TAKES NEW TURN HERE; WINDOWS BROKEN, FENCES ARE TORN DOWN

Mischief night, last night, took a new turn when windows in private residences were broken, water thrown inside houses, and fences torn down. The usual breaking of glass, smashing of bottles, playing of tick-tacks, and the milder forms of mischief appear to be passing out of vogue.

"Stop" signs were pushed over, garbage cans upset, windows soaped as well as automobiles. A window at the Bath street school was smashed, and a window at the residence of the janitor, George McEuen, adjoining, was broken. A window at 2119 Wilson avenue was shattered and water was thrown into the house. The "Stop" sign at Wood and Mill streets was pushed over.

A fence at Moffo's Shoe Repair Shop, Buckley street, was torn down. At the residence of Mr. and Mrs.

LEARN OF NUTS AND THEIR FOOD VALUE

Specimens of Several Are Displayed by Lester S. Thomas

AT SCIENCE MEETING

NEWTOWN, Oct. 31.—Approximately 40 were in attendance at the last meeting of the 1950 series of the Bucks County Natural Science Association, held in Council Rock high school auditorium, Saturday.

The first speaker was Lester S. Thomas, of near Churchville. His subject being "Let's Go Nutting," he brought specimens of a large number of nuts. He told something of the food value of each—all high in calories. Of the hickories he described the shagbark, king, mocker, pig, butter and the pecan. The black and the white walnuts were compared. The native chestnut he felt surpassed the Spanish, Japanese or Chinese. He showed the tiny chinquapin, which once grew in this area as evidenced by a hill of that name in the Holland vicinity. He gave a lesson in the two classes of oaks—the white and the black, and showed many acorns. The largest was a fine mossy cup (quercus macrocarpa). There are 15 types of oaks in Bucks. He thought the tiny triangular beech nut, in its fair way somewhat spiny

DOCTOR SHORTAGE IS NOTED IN THE BORO' OF BRISTOL

Thirteen Physicians Here, Or One for Every 1080 Persons

FIGURES ARE QUOTED

Situation Here Compares Unfavorably With Those In U. S. Generally

(Special to Courier)

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—In line with an acute shortage of physicians reported in various sections of the United States, such a deficiency exists in Bristol at present, according to data gathered by the American Medical Association. Furthermore, the measures taken by the President for the drafting of doctors may add to the local situation.

Bristol has a total of 13 physicians with local offices or residences, equivalent to one doctor for every 1,080 people. This compares unfavorably with conditions throughout the country generally, where there are 201,278 doctors, or one for every 750 persons. In the State of Pennsylvania as a whole there is one doctor per 746 inhabitants.

The growth of the medical population in the past 20 years is pointed out by Dr. George Lull, secretary of the AMA. In 1930 the nation had 154,500 doctors serving a total of 122,775,000 people, or one for every 795 persons. Since then there has been a slow but steady increase, with most of the new practitioners flocking to the larger centers.

WASHINGTON REPORT
By FULTON LEWIS, JR.
(Copyright, 1950
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—The loud and righteous wall recently from the usual clique of professional do-gooders because some incoming aliens were delayed at Ellis Island was in reality the opening shot in the pinko campaign to discredit the McCarran-Mundt-Nixon Communist control bill and get it off the books.

FEEDING KOREANS

Withdrawal of American forces from Korea in the near future is not in the cards. Sufficient U. S. troops will remain in the devastated country to maintain order and bring about a semblance of normal conditions. And what a job it will be.

It is proposed to unite North and South Korea into one nation, with a single government—a tremendous task in itself. After that has been accomplished will come the job of feeding the people, including 150,000 prisoners of war.

The whole country has been laid waste. The capital of North Korea, with a population of 500,000, has been practically destroyed. There are no utilities, the remaining citizens are bewildered and hungry. Everywhere there is death and desolation.

Restoration of Korea will depend to a considerable extent upon the attitude of Russia, which sponsored the invasion of South Korea, and which is expected to hamper any effort in behalf of peace. After winning the war, the task of caring for the victims and feeding the starving will also fall to America.

FLIGHT FROM FREEDOM

Not all of the facts concerning the disappearance of Bruno Pontecorvo, the naturalized British atomic scientist who has not been seen on this side of the iron curtain since September 2, are clear. For example, he may be in Moscow or he may not. But it is certain he has been lost to sight of free men.

The story of Bruno Pontecorvo's journey from Italy, where he had gone for a vacation after resigning from the big British atomic research center at Harwell, is fascinating and frightening. Apparently none of his friends had thought much of it when he started out with his family for Copenhagen—after all, he was to have become professor of experimental physics at Liverpool University in January. And it was not until six weeks after he had left Rome that Italian newspapers reported he had vanished.

It was possible to trace him as far as Helsinki. He and his Swedish wife and his three children had gone from Rome to Copenhagen, from Copenhagen to Stockholm, and then to the Finnish capital. They had not stopped in Stockholm, though Mrs. Pontecorvo's parents live only a 15-minute ride from the airlines office. They had gone to Helsinki without visas, and their passports were taken up. But apparently they had no further use for them. It appears they boarded a Soviet ship bound for Russia.

What Pontecorvo knew about atomic weapons is in dispute. It is not known whether he went to Russia voluntarily or by command. But there is no doubt that if he and his family are alive and in Soviet territory they have turned their backs on freedom forever.

Football season is too new for the alumni to decide whether to fire the coach or give him another chance.

ly soft, in his attitude toward lefties. Richardson has been head of the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board—the appeals court in personnel loyalty cases. He testified last spring that about half of the cases taken to his board were reversed by it, and the accused individuals reinstated. Among them, specifically, was the case of William W. Remington of the Commerce Department, who since has been fired by Secretary Sawyer despite the Richardson whitewash. Richardson's appointment is subject to Senate confirmation, but until Congress comes back into session, he holds the job in full force on an interim appointment. Another member of the new board is Charles M. LaFollette, a former Republican member of Congress from Indiana who until recently was executive director of the far-left-wing Americans for Democratic Action. That gives you a rough idea of what the board will be like.

George MacReynolds Dies At Age of 89; Well Known

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 31—George MacReynolds, librarian of the Bucks County Historical Society for the past sixteen years, and a former newspaper editor and author of several books, died at his home here, 81 West State street, Friday night. He was 89.

For the past two years he had been on a leave of absence from the historical society, editing and preparing for publication a new book on the history of the Doan outlaws. Mr. MacReynolds was a well-known conservationist. He was president of the Bucks County Natural Science Association for several years and was a member of the American Ornithologist Union since 1917. He served for many years as secretary of the Bucks County Fish, Game and Forestry Association, of which he was a charter member. He was a past secretary and an honorary member of the Union Horse Company of Doylestown.

He was born in Doylestown, the eldest son of Thomas and Wilhelmina MacReynolds, and lived in Chalfont for a short time. He was educated at the Doylestown English and Classical Seminary. At the age of 17 years he entered the Doylestown Democrat as a printer's apprentice and three years later was placed on the reportorial staff of the same newspaper. In 1880 Mr. MacReynolds accepted a position as managing editor of the South Bethlehem Star, but later the same year returned to Doylestown to accept the editorship of the Doylestown Daily Democrat, a position that he held until the paper's suspension. He then became editor of the Pottsville Daily Blade, his last newspaper position.

Mr. MacReynolds was a former member of the Doylestown School Board, and for two terms was Democratic county chairman of Bucks county. He was author of "The Birds of Bucks County," "Place Names in Bucks County," and a number of historical pamphlets of importance pertaining to Bucks county.

Because of poor health during the past two years, Mr. MacReynolds was not able to carry on his duties as librarian personally, but devoted most of his time at home

A Child's Bad Grammar

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.
A COMMON source of irritation between husband and wife or parents and children is bad grammar. How humiliating to the average wife or husband to have a grammatical mistake by her or him pointed out by the spouse, and if the "correction" were to be made before other persons! Imagine the embarrassment to a parent, also, when a child corrects this parent's grammar. Of course, a married person with good manners doesn't so embarrass a mate; nor does a child, well brought up, so humiliate his parent.

But parents think nothing of correcting their children's grammar anywhere, anytime. Naturally these children, on discovering a grammatical mistake made by a parent, may hasten to correct it, gaining strong personal satisfaction from doing so.

If parents don't use baby talk with the infant he will soon use pretty good grammar till he begins to run about among children from six to twelve. Usually after a twelve or thirteen the average child, unless his gang uses very poor English, desires to appear grown-up and has, therefore, a motive to employ good grammar, though he may use much slang. As he approaches or enters his twenties, most slang may have less lure for him.

With the child from six to twelve the average parent's attitude toward bad grammar is similar to the parent's attitude toward manners. She dreads to have her more sophisticated adult friends suppose she speaks bad grammar at home and fails to teach her children accurate English. She fears she might be classed by her adult friends as inferior.

Children often corrected for bad grammar are irritated by the correction because they suppose their parents are making this correction to win approval of adult friends; also, because the parents are usually angry when they make the corrections; the corrections are scolded at them. Both these reasons suggest to the child that his parents are treating him as very inferior to them.

Parents who wish to do most for promoting good grammatical speech in their children will aim first at cultivating happy, companionable relationships with these children. They rarely or never will interrupt the child to correct his grammar, nor will they ever correct him when they show or even feel irritation at his errors. Until the child really wants to improve his speech, correction by his parents can make his grammar worse instead of better.

In an occasional family, the relationships are so fine that the members enjoy the game of "catching" one another on a grammatical error, as when leisurely conversing together around the dinner table. Some adolescent girls and boys are aware that they make a few grammatical errors repeatedly and that these errors handicap them in winning popularity among certain other youths. These boys and girls could help themselves by using my bulletins "Common Grammatical Mistakes by Parents and Children" (to be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of this paper.) So could a wife or husband, who is sensitive about reminders of grammatical errors by the spouse. So, also, might parents find some help from this bulletin.

Bell Telephone installer Charles J. Lewis and Mrs. Lewis buying furniture for their new home in Indiana, Pa.

His Job Helps Make Jobs
Throughout Pennsylvania, Bell Telephone men and women are good customers of many, many types of local business: furniture stores, food stores, drugstores, service stations, to name a few.
With an annual earning power of more than $100 million, Bell Telephone people help in no small measure to provide jobs and wages for people in many other lines.
Thus the money you spend in payment of telephone bills does more than buy good telephone service. It assures good wages for telephone people...and, in turn, it means added income for men and women in local business almost everywhere in Pennsylvania.

Population Shifts Cause Problems

more police, better traffic facilities, expanded sewage systems, water and similar needs and the tax base hasn't gone up fast enough to provide the money for these things," Helton said.

"Such changes are the inevitable effect of a great war. And with the new long range national defense program getting underway and increasing industrial production needed, these trends in migration may be expected to continue.

"At least it will stop the reverse trend of the backwash that usually returns to former homes after wars."

He explained that while central cities continue to grow, the fringe areas revealed a tremendous shift in population.

Philadelphia best illustrates the trend, Helton said. From 1930 to 1940, Philadelphia lost two percent of its population but the next decade revealed a five percent increase.

Meanwhile, the nearby counties, Bucks and Delaware, jumped 33 percent in population with Montgomery and Chester close behind.

Factors generally credited by census experts with the shift to the suburbs are:

(1) The urge of a family to own a house and a small piece of land. This was made possible by postwar prosperity and with rising employment expected to continue because of defense.

(2) Increased automobile ownership and better transportation facilities of all types.

(3) Lack of housing, overcrowding and, to some extent, the desire to escape higher urban taxes.

In the average central city, traffic and parking are the most immediate difficulties that can be traced directly to suburban developments, according to Helton.

Streets are taking more pounding, require greater maintenance and though new highways are being built some valuable, taxwise property is shelved for conversion into parking lots in downtown areas.

In addition to utility problems are those of welfare and education. Helton said city fathers have the unenviable future of collecting additional tax monies necessary to serve the needs both of the cities and the new suburban communities and finding a system whereby the suburbanites bear their share of the cost.

is a net addition of 20,000 doctors in the next ten years. To produce that number would be a $321,000,000 project, it states.

As a long range goal, to properly serve the medical needs of the country, there should be a doctor for every 585 people, holds the FSA. To suit that condition now, with its present population, Bristol would have to have a total of 21 doctors, or 11 more than at present.

burr, was often overlooked. The American filbert does not grow on a tree but on a shrub—hazel nut. The two-leaf bract with round nuts are none too plentiful. The horse chestnut is an imported tree—related to the buckeye of Ohio. The very ancient ginkgo tree has a bad smelling fruit but the nut in the fruit is palatable. The beans on the Kentucky coffee tree were once ground for coffee. The small nuts of the pinon pine of the southwest were shined. Probably the most unusual of all were South American nuts—the Brazil nut sometime called para—or cream or butter (bertholletia) has a heavy dark case—heavier than a cocoa nut's—and the ivory nut which belongs to the palms and is plentiful along the Amazon. A common name elephant nut comes from the fact that its hard white meat can replace the elephant's tusk ivory. Its scientific name is phytelphas.

James A. Fowler, educational director at the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia, gave an illustrated lecture on "Nature Nearby." He showed sections of country near his home in Rosemont—taken at all seasons of the year. The spring peeper, the box turtle which lives 150 years and the woods frog formed one group of pictures. The opossum, this country's only marsupial, and the red fox had been snapped, as also praying mantis and cecropia moth. Tracks of nocturnal animals in snow were explained. The weeping willows, the early spring skunk cabbage and the primitive horse tails made fine studies but birds perhaps captured the most interest. Some pictures included the tree sparrow, the screech owl in both color phases, the titmouse, the red wings and the yellow warblers.

Announcement was made of the annual meeting of the Delaware Valley Naturalist Union of which the Bucks association has been a part for over 50 years. Mr. Cadbury lived many years near

New York Times Raises Price of Sunday Issue

The New York Times announced yesterday that, because of increased costs, the price of its Sunday edition would be raised to 25 cents in the area outside a fifty-mile radius of New York City, effective Sunday Nov. 5.

The 15-cent price within the metropolitan area remains unchanged, as does the price of the weekday edition.

Increasing prices of newsprint were condemned yesterday as "contributory to inflation and a threat to the continued position of newspapers as the major media for American retail advertising."

This attack, coming as more price-boosting by mills followed the pattern started twenty days ago, was made by Charles G. Nichols, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, in New York. It took the form of a letter sent to Robert M. Fowler, president of the Newsprint Association of Canada.

In line with the increase announced last Thursday by International Paper Company, Bowater's Newfoundland Pulp and Paper Mills, Ltd., Corner Brook, Nfld., a British-owned producer, was reported ready to raise its price $6 per ton. Other Canadian mills, led by Powell River Paper Company, have announced increases of $10 per ton. New prices, most effective Nov. 1, bring totals up to $106 to $110 per ton.

northwest of the heavy industry center held by Allied forces.

Other Red units were pressing down toward Hamburg from the vicinity of Sinburg, 25 miles to the north-northwest.

Chinese prisoners were quoted as saying their units had been ordered to recapture Hamburg by Wednesday.

A Red drive to the big hub and the port of Hamburg would thrust a splitting wedge between the southern and northern portions of some 30,000 U. S. Marine, American Seventh Infantry Division and South Korean troops strung out along the east coast.

Enemy units already had slashed the shoreline road behind ROK Capital Division vanguards which had raced up to a point three miles northeast of Songjin and 133 air miles southwest of the Soviet Siberian border.

Bristol Twp. Elementary School

Edgely Primary

Second grade pupils in Edgely primary school have enjoyed the study of plants in the surrounding area. Their particular interest has been the study of seeds—how they are protected and how they travel. They learned that wind, water, and people carry seeds from one place to another, that seeds are equipped with "parachutes," stickers, and attractive shells and burrs to facilitate transportation. Field trips were taken in which seeds on plant life were observed. Pupils took many interesting kinds of seeds to the classroom. The study increased recognition of plant life. Pupils learned that the attractive orchid-like thistle, with its menacing stickers, came to this country from Russia about 60 years ago; the Spanish needle from Spain. Queen Anne's lace has provoked thought. Among the most interesting seeds were milkweed, catnip and thistle.

Mischief Night Takes New Turn Here

Charles Boyd, Wilson avenue, a rock was hurled through the dining room window after 11 o'clock last night. The rock broke a large pane of glass in the storm sash, and a small pane in the inside window. Shivers of glass were scattered throughout the living room and dining room, necessitating a thorough cleaning of furnishings today.

A fire was started by mischief-makers in a trash bin at Safe Food Market, Bristol Terrace 1, but no harm was caused. It is stated. Treads of front porch steps at the home of Sydney Scott, 319 Barry Place, were ripped off and tossed on the lawn.

DO YOU THINK IT'S A FRAME, MISS DAY?

YOU'VE BEEN GOING TOGETHER A LONG TIME, HAVEN'T YOU?

YES...OF COURSE...YES...YES...

FOR PETE'S SAKE, LET THE GIRL ALONE! COME ON, MOLLY...PINKY...IN THIS ROOM

ALL RIGHT, PAT, FIRST I WANT YOU TO UNDERSTAND...STORY...RIGHT FROM THE BEGINNING...POSITIVELY DID NOT KILL THAT MAN

OKAY, CHIEF, BUT I'D LIKE TO HAVE YOU REMEMBER...

BEFORE I COULD DO ANYTHING I WAS SLUGGED FROM BEHIND. THAT'S ALL I REMEMBER...

AND AT NO TIME DID YOU FIRE YOUR GUN

I DID IT! I DID IT! EVEN HAVE IT, CHIEF

...AND, AS I ARGUED WITH HIM, A GUN WAS THRUST UNDER MY RIGHT ARM AND FIRED FOUR TIMES. FOR A SECOND I FROZE, BUT I NOTICED A GLOVE ON THE HAND

Charles Boyd, Wilson avenue, a rock was hurled through the dining room window after 11 o'clock last night. The rock broke a large pane of glass in the storm sash, and a small pane in the inside window. Shivers of glass were scattered throughout the living room and dining room, necessitating a thorough cleaning of furnishings today.

A fire was started by mischief-makers in a trash bin at Safe Food Market, Bristol Terrace 1, but no harm was caused. It is stated. Treads of front porch steps at the home of Sydney Scott, 319 Barry Place, were ripped off and tossed on the lawn.
